1. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
2. Upon reconsideration, the Examiner has opted to make a new ground of rejection in the form of a 35 USC 112 rejection, as noted below. The Examiner apologizes for not making this rejection in the previous office action. As such, this action cannot be made final.
3. Claims 12 to 16, 18 to 23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The phrase "cosmetic effect" is indefinite since one cannot determine what is and is not embraced by this term. For instance, the specific effects found in claim 14 and for compound (I) in claim 12 are clear with the exception of "reducing effect". It is unclear what this means and thus, reading the phrase "cosmetic effect" in light of the specification, one cannot determine the breadth of these claims.

4. Claims 12 to 16, 19 to 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) or, in the alternative, under 35 USC 103(a) as obvious over Liebskind et al.

This rejection relies on the rationale of record, and as such this will not be repeated. Applicants have amended claim 12 to require that the cosmetic effect be coloring, UV stabilizing, antifungal or reducing. However the cationic amine found in Liebskind et al. will inherently have a antifungal effect. While this property is not specifically taught by Liebskind et al. they do clearly suggest it by mentioning on column 12, lines 35 to 40, antimold effects. Note that mold is a type of fungus. On the other hand, the prior art need not recognize an inherent property in the composition to render claims unpatentable. The fact that the composition will inherently meet this limitation is sufficient.

To support the Examiner's position of inherency, she also cites 5,281,240 and 5,319,049. She notes that these references need not be included in the basis for the rejection as they are cited to support a position of inherency for a property that will necessarily be in the prior art composition.

See column 3, lines 20 to 60, of '049 which teaches that ammonium groups such as that in Liebskind et al. provide antifungal and mildewproofing properties. See also column 3, lines 30 to 64, of '240 which teach that an ammonium silane is effective against fungi.

Thus, while not specifically taught, the ammonium group in Liebskind et al. would have been expected to inherently possess antifungal properties and thus meets the limitation in claim 12. The remaining claims are met by Liebskind et al. for reasons of record.

With regard to claims 19 to 21, note that the rejection applies to these claims because they fail to limit the cosmetic effect of the silane compound. They depend upon claim 14 which further limits the siloxane.

With regard to claim 22, note that the phrase "hair product ingredients" is quite broad and that the composition in Liebskind et al. contains various components which can also be found in a hair product. See for instance the stabilizers on column 27, the dyes suggested on column 34, lines 51 to 63, and the surfactants and detergents on column 34, line 37.

5. Claim 18 would be allowable if rewritten or amended to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action. As noted in the previous office action, the prior art fails to teach or suggest such a disiloxane.

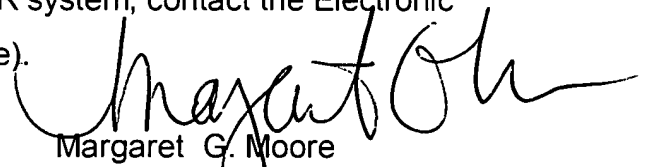

6. Claim 23 would be allowable if rewritten to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action and to include all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims. The prior art fails to teach or suggest the addition of hair products ingredients for holding or shaping hair. The general teaching of cosmetics on column 33 is inadequate to render obvious such additional ingredients.
